lintels. In addition, the house was originally described as being in excellent condition and altered. It was observed that this property appears unchanged from the description in the attached form.

The house reportedly dates from the mid-nineteenth century and is a straightforward example of the local vernacular architecture. The house is not associated with historic events or persons that would qualify it for registration under National Register Criteria A or B. However, the character of its design and construction qualify it for eligibility under Criterion C: Design/Construction.

William Kral House/Bennett Gilbert Home Place
822 Aldino-Stepney Road
Aberdeen, Maryland 21001

Referred to as "Bennett Gilbert's Home Place" in all deeds since his death in 1893, this two-story, gable-roofed fieldstone house was constructed in two parts early in the second half of the nineteenth century. The Gilberts owned much of the land around Carsins Run and Centerville (now Aldino) from the middle of the 19th century on. Ida Belle and William O. Michael lived here in the early part of the 20th century, and the Michael family gravestones are located north of the house.

Architecturally, the house is typical of the local vernacular in several respects. The heavy lintels in the earlier section are reminiscent of the design of the Cavalry Methodist Church (HA-997) -- a homemade way of decorating the facade using local raw skills and materials. The second entrance in the later section was standard in the 2nd half of the 19th century. The older portion (usually containing the kitchen) was generally relegated to family and private use, while the new addition often comprised a formal parlor, which demanded a formal and separate entrance.

This two-story gable-roofed stone house built in two parts is located on the west side of Aldino-Stepney Road, north of Churchville Road, (Md. Rt. 22).

This house is five bays wide (on the front-or south side) and one room deep, with stone chimneys in each end. The exterior chimney on the east is replaced; the interior chimney on the west is original. The three bays on the west (containing a window-door-window, respectively), belong to the older section; the two bays on the east, containing a door in the west bay and a window in the east, belong to the later section. The boxed cornice on the south side is unbroken. Only a slight change in the stonework between the two sections suggests separate dates of construction. The 4-bay long, one-story frame addition on the north was a porch that has recently been enclosed.

Windows consistently have 6/6 sash. Those in the older section are of smaller size and have massive stone lintels on the south side. Windows in the later section have wooden lintels.

The west end of the older section is blank. The north side has three windows in the second story, and, in the first story, one on the west side of the frame addition and two on the east.

The east end of the later section has two windows in each story flanking the chimney.

At one time, the house was stuccoed and had a porch across the front. The interior has been slightly re-arranged. The older section contains two rooms, as it did originally, but the interior wall has been moved to the west, and the winder staircase in the north-east corner of the west room has been removed. The latter has a fireplace (recently rebuilt) in the west wall. In the east room, where there was a window and an exterior entrance in the east wall are now an entrance to the basement and an entrance to the east section, respectively.

The east section contains one room on the first floor, with a staircase (replaced) against the west wall. The mantel in the east wall is original, but had no fireplace opening originally. The four-panel entrance door has lozenge-shaped panels in the top and se agonal panels in the bottom; the back-or interior-side is plain. This section has molded window and door trim.

Originally, only the oldest section had a basement-with full log joists and a fireplace in the west wall.

In the attic, the rafters are logs butted together at the peak.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

When the present owners purchased this 118 acre farm in 1943<sup>1</sup>, the deed referred to it as the "Bennett Gilbert Home Place". Indeed, all deeds since Bennett Gilbert's death in 1893 labelled the farm as his "home place"

According to the present owners, the date 1867 was carved on the steps of the east or second section of the house. The west or earlier portion may not have been built more than a decade earlier, as suggested by the 1858 Jennings and Herrick Map, which shows no house here.

The Gilberts owned much of the land around Carsins Run and Centerville (now Aldino) from the middle of the 19th century on. Ida Belle and William O. Michael, lived here in the early part of this century and Michael family gravestones are located north of the house.

Architecturally, the house is typical of the local vernacular in several respects. The heavy lintels in the earlier section are reminiscent of the design of the Cavalry Methodist Church (HA-997)-a homemade way of decorating the facade using local raw skills and materials. The second entrance in the later section was standard in the 2nd half of the 19th century. The older portion (usually containing the kitchen) was generally relegated to family and private use, while the new addition often comprised a formal parlor, which demanded a formal and separate entrance.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This stone farmhouse, T-shaped, 2 stories high, faces south, the pitched roof ridgeline running east-west. Five bays by none, two doors open to the south lawn, but the entrance is through the one-story porch on the north to the enclosed office. Large stone chimneys in either end wall rise from heating fireplaces upstairs and down, all but one in the kitchen in the west end of the house closed off at present. Windows have six lights over six. The lawn is densely planted with trees, and a thick hedge screens out noise from the side road, but the barnyard on the west side of the house bustles with grandchildren and their ponies, chickens, and dogs.
